

Legal Shots

Caregivers' regime: annual leave of 5 working days

Employees who have the status of "caregiver" will now be granted an annual leave of 5 working days.

Employees who have the status of "caregiver" will now be granted an annual leave of 5 working days that must be taken consecutively to assist the cared-for person.

To this end, the law requires the caregiver to inform the employer, in writing, with a prior notice of 10 working days before the leave and a declaration that the other members of his/her household or those from the household of the cared-for person (if they have a professional activity), are not taking that leave in the same period. Also, it must be declared that no other part of the household is available to aid.

Meet our Team:

