Coming into force of the changes
to the labour law

Exceptions: provisions on collective bargaining agreements and amendments to the domestic service regime.

With the enactment of the legislation regarding the Decent Work Agenda, the date for the entry into force is approaching.

Although most of the changes shall come into force on the first day of the month following the publication of the law, the bill provides for two exceptions:

- Provisions concerning collective bargaining agreements: enter into force on the day following the publication of the law;
- Amendments to the domestic service regime: enter into force 60 days after the publication of the law.
